

30th November 2018

To whom it may concern:

RE: Reference for Josh Dury

I am delighted to provide a reference for Josh Dury who volunteered at Wildscreen Festival, 15-19 October 2018.

The 2018 Wildscreen Festival was the 19th edition of the Festival – the world’s biggest global gathering of natural world storytellers. Held in Bristol, UK, the biennial event convenes more than 900 filmmakers, photographers, broadcasters and content creators, from around the world, for an unrivalled week-long programme of events.

Josh was selected after interview, from over 130 applicants, for the role of Tech Show Assistant at Wildscreen 2018. In this role Josh was the key contact and support for the exhibiting companies showcasing their latest technology in the festival’s main venue. Josh was friendly, helpful and professional in his dealings with the exhibiting companies including Canon, Esprit and Swarovski. Josh responded well to changing priorities and the many varied tasks that the organisers asked of him.

It was a pleasure to have Josh as a volunteer at the Wildscreen Festival, he was a reliable member of the team who generously gave up his time to help put on a successful event. We’re extremely grateful to Josh for all his hard work and involvement both as a volunteer and through his participation in the programme as a delegate. We wish him every success in the future.

Best wishes,

Abi Edgar
Volunteer Coordinator
Wildscreen 2018